Have you ever dreamed of flying high in your own private jet, foregoing the crowded airport terminals and tight-squeeze of coach for the luxury of charter service? With the launch of Jet-It-Together.com's new online community for booking shared private jets, that dream may have become slightly more realistic.

John Ackermann, one of the founders of Jet-It-Together, LLC hopes that "this new online service gives members the option to have an enjoyable travel experience for a fraction of the cost of a traditional private jet charter."

By serving as a portal where members can match their itineraries with other members with similar travel plans, individuals can split the final cost of a private charter flight or private jet rental. Members can also share their "wish lists" of chartered flights using the Going My Way? feature, a tool that allows members to input the flight path they'd like to take, but the trip remains open-ended and is only booked if other members are found to off-set the cost. Of course members with the pocket-books to do so can still secure the entire plane for themselves if they don't want to share the flight with strangers. Membership is free and requires little more than an email address.

Curious travelers who don't want to sign up for membership can still search the listing of pending trips utilizing private jets. For only $382 you can split the cost four-ways and fly onboard a private jet from White Plains, NY to Westhampton Beach, about 90 miles away. Those with deeper pockets can have an entire plane to themselves, including any dogs or cats they wish to bring on board. between Boca Raton, Florida and Trenton, NJ for $13,004.

While lately the usage of a private jet has served as fodder for political commentators of both sides, whether it be when former Democratic presidential candidates flew to the first presidential debate or when CEOs of the Big Three automotive companies flew to Washington D.C in private jets to request taxpayer bailout funds, can see the rationale behind a site offering charter flights and private airline travel to the average citizen. The dog and cat friendly airplanes, could be a big draw to pet owners needing to travel with multiple animals cross-country, and one of the only options for bringing pets on board. And the you have special occasions - proposals, honeymoons and anniversaries - where the luxury of a private plane wouldn't necessarily seem over the top.
